Section 94509(a) of the consumer products regulation specifies volatile organic compound (VOC) standards for various categories of consumer products. These standards include a 25 percent VOC limit (by weight) for aerosol dusting aids, which became effective on January 1, 1997, and a 7 percent VOC limit (by weight) for all other forms of dusting aids, which became effective on January 1, 1995. In addition, section 94514 of the consumer products regulation allows any person who cannot comply with the requirements of section 94509, because of extraordinary reasons beyond the person's reasonable control, to apply to the Executive Officer for a variance. The applicant has applied for a variance from the 25 percent VOC limit and the 7 percent VOC limit for dusting aids. The criteria and procedures for granting a variance are specified in section 94514.

The applicant listed below has applied for a variance under section 94514.

The public hearing to consider the variance application will be conducted in accordance with procedures set forth in section 94514 of the consumer products regulation. At the hearing, the applicant will be asked to present evidence demonstrating that the criteria for granting a variance have been met. Interested members of the public will be allowed a reasonable opportunity to testify at the hearing. All parties may, but need not, be represented by counsel at the hearing. Subsequent to the hearing, the Executive Officer shall determine whether, under what conditions, and to what extent a variance is necessary and will be permitted.
