Subject: Reclaimed refrigerant in MVAC small cans
Comment:

Dear CARB,

I support the proposed rules to require reclaimed refrigerant in MVAC small cans that contain a refrigerant with a GWP over 150. Although more stringent policies would likely be easier to enforce and yield increased environmental benefits, such as Washington's prohibition on sale of small cans with refrigerant with a GWP >150, requiring reclaimed refrigerant is a next best option.

CARB may wish to consider, at the outset, ways to mitigate the potential for misconduct. Online sales and cross-state-border shipments could pose a threat to successful implementation of the reclaimed refrigerant requirements. CARB should coordinate with its enforcement division and/or other authorities within California to develop a robust plan to minimize and mitigate cheating.

Additionally, CARB may wish to consider methods to assure that reclaimed refrigerant is not simply virgin refrigerant charged into and then immediately recovered from a large system for purposes of counting it as "reclaim." This scenario has been discussed in industry forums as a method to meet the demand for recovered refrigerant, and as a possible lucrative option if prices of reclaimed refrigerant happen to exceed the price of virgin refrigerant.

Best regards,

Kristen Taddonio
