STATE OF CALIFORNIA
AIR RESOURCES BOARD

APPROVED AUXILIARY FUEL TANKS

The California Air Resources Board requires manufacturers of auxiliary fuel tanks to obtain approval of their tanks before they can be sold or installed in California vehicles. Fuel tank manufacturers are required to update their approval if they wish to include newer model-year vehicles.

The Air Resources Board does not verify compliance of an auxiliary fuel tank with applicable federal and state safety regulations. Compliance with safety laws and regulations remains the responsibility of the fuel tank manufacturer.

The attached table lists the tanks approved as of April 1, 1990.
